June: Dairy and Beef Month Rolled into One

Cows Supply both Milk and Meat

Last month Commissioner of Agriculture Hugh Weathers wrote about his visit to the Satterwhite Farms in Newberry. Since the Satterwhites have the most up-to-date technology available, and June is dairy month, here's a more in-depth look at this vital industry.

Cows feeding at Satterwhite Farms

Did you know that the average dairy cow consumes 120 pounds of food a day? And you thought your teenager could eat!

Multiply 120 pounds by 1,100 cows, and that's 66 tons of feed. Kevin Satterwhite of Satterwhite Farms in Newberry knows exactly how much it takes to keep his herd milking at full capacity. As a fourth-generation dairy farmer, he is committed to the land, the cows, and a way of life that can be experienced only by those who live on a farm. The farm consists of four family member owners:

Wayne (Kevin's father), William (his uncle), Steve (his cousin) and Kevin.

Like most modern farmers, Kevin has embraced technology. Gone are the parlors where cows were milked by hand—today's operations can milk up to 400 cows an hour. The most up-to-date innovation for dairy farmers is a rotary parlor, installed by Delaval. While each set of 60 cows takes a nice ride on the carousel, individual cows are milked in only nine minutes, including prep time.

In return for their prodigious appetites, these Holsteins produce from 74 to 80 pounds of milk per day. That's nearly 10 gallons each. All of Kevin's cows are home-bred, with the exception of some replacement heifers he'll have to buy to keep up with his new rotary parlor. Each cow has a career of five to six years. In addition to her milk, she produces at least two calves before she is put into service.

Interestingly, while the number of dairies in South Carolina has decreased dramatically—with only 82 dairies left in the state—the number of cows has remained nearly constant. The bigger dairies are milking more cows, faster, than the smaller operations could handle. Three milkings a day are standard now. Satterwhite cows are milked at 3 a.m., 11 a.m., and 7 p.m. Each milking takes about three and a half hours, or nearly half a day--every day of the year.

The cows in the milk herd live in comparative luxury: a modern high-roofed barn, thermostatically controlled, keeps them cool in the summer and warm and dry in the winter. Contented cows really do give more milk.

Border Security— Up Close and Personal

Recently I had the opportunity to visit the great state of Texas, along with several other agriculture commissioners from across the South. We were treated to some great Texas hospitality (not to mention food!) and got the chance to compare notes on what other states are doing. With agriculture changing so rapidly, it was great to know that South Carolina is on the forefront in a lot of practices.

Most interestingly, we had the opportunity to visit the United States/Mexico border. It's one thing to talk about securing the borders, but it's quite another thing to see it firsthand.

We went to customs inspections, which averages 1,700 trucks per day crossing the border. Our officials are more concerned with what comes into our country than what leaves, but I learned that about 25 percent of those trucks are carrying Ag products. Customs inspectors use very sophisticated procedures to ensure that what comes in is exactly what it's supposed to

Although there are fewer agents on the Texas portion of the border than California and Arizona, they still have a vast area to patrol. Many people who live in Mexico will give anything they have—literally—to get away from the violence and poverty that seems to be rampant in their country. The agents gave us some rather gruesome examples to make their point.

Sirloin Pita Salad Sandwich with Herbed Yogurt Dressing

For the dressing:

2 (8-ounce) containers fat-free plain yogurt

2 teaspoons minced garlic

1 tablespoon minced parsley

1 tablespoon minced chive 1 teaspoon dried oregano

For the sandwich:

1/2 pound sirloin or rib-eye steak, trimmed

1/4 teaspoon salt

1/8 teaspoon pepper

4 (4 -inch) whole wheat pita bread rounds, cut in half-moons

2 1/2 cups mixed salad greens (such as arugula, radicchio and baby spinach leaves)

2/3 cup crumbled blue cheese

1/2 small red onion, sliced and separated into rings

8 cherry tomatoes, halved

Prep time: 20 minutes. Cook time: 12 minutes. Yield:

Spoon yogurt into a medium bowl and stir in garlic, parsley, chive and oregano until well blended; set

Rub both sides of steak with salt and pepper. Heat a medium, non-stick skillet over medium-high heat. Cook steak about 6 minutes on each side (for medium) or until desired. Allow steak to rest 5 minutes before cutting into Warm pita halves in toaster. Into each pita half, spoon 1/4 of the yogurt dressing, mixed salad greens, blue cheese, onion, steak and tomato. Spoon additional yogurt dressing over top.

Customs agents average 1,400 apprehensions per day along the border, and sadly, a great number of them are young children. The agents say that's the toughest part of their job--enforcing laws and showing compassion for the children.

Since Texas and Mexico are separated by the Rio Grande, many people try to cross the river on small rafts or boats. We rode the river with the patrol boats, which apprehend about 150 suspects a day. We could see the small rafts used to cross the water, and then abandoned on the banks. With 1250 miles of river, there's no way the agents can keep a close eye on all the attempts to get out of Imagine living in a country where you would risk your life to cross the border to get away from drug violence. Some people want to surrender to the U.S. rather than deal with the criminal activity at home. The agents routinely find bodies in the river that are obvious victims of drug violence.

I asked the director of customs, "What is a good day and what's a bad day?" He replied that a good day is one with no injuries to agents or suspects.

The authorities spend quite a bit of time focusing on drug traffic and gangs operating in areas close to the border. They have tough decisions to make, because the pursuit of drug dealers has had innocent bystanders hurt and killed. No one wants that, but drug dealers need to be stopped before their products get into our country.

We have discussed the need many times to update the guest worker program to supply much needed labor for agricultural harvest if the local labor supply cannot meet the needs. If we do that, that would allow border patrol resources to be more focused on those intending to do us harm in this country. Many of the people seeking to come here want opportunities for a better life, and they want to work to support their families, not necessarily to gain citizenship. A lot of our commodities in South Carolina depend upon temporary labor to tend and harvest the crops. We have great respect for the honest, hard-working people who not only seek a better way of life, but contribute to our industry.

The ideal situation would be for agents to stop those who deal in drugs or human trafficking and yet allow the sincere immigrant to achieve his dream of living in a country relatively free of crime and corruption. The number of people who risk their lives every day is proof that our country really does offer the American dream as a

Beef Month

The South Carolina cattle and beef industry will celebrate June as beef month in the Palmetto State. This industry is a Top 10 agriculture cash commodity and contributes to new wealth and economic growth.

Miller Foster, president of the SC Cattlemen's Association and a cattle producer from Spartanburg, says the state's 3,500 cattle producers raise quality, safe animals on their farms. Cattle producers care for their animals and land as well as they do their own families.

Today's consumers can be assured of safe, lean and nutritious beef from South Carolina producers. Carl Setzler, a cattle producer from Newberry and chairman of the SC Beef Council, says lean beef promotes a healthy lifestyle. He encourages the use of beef in meal solutions to get "ZIP" (zinc, iron and

As the summer months begin, both Foster and Setzler continue to promote beef to consumers all during the summer grilling season, Memorial Day through Labor Day. An especially important day for grilling juicy steaks or burgers is Father's Day on June 15.

Beef and Forage Field Day June 10

Clemson University Extension will host the annual Beef and Forage Field Day at the Edisto Research and Education Center on June 10. Registration is at 9 a.m.

The keynote speaker for 2014 will be Dr. Dennis Hancock from the University of Georgia. Dr. Hancock will update producers on the latest research findings related to the biology and control of a new and rapidly spreading pest that has serious impacts on the yields of bermudagrass hayfields and pastures.

Additional speakers will highlight upcoming research on animal identification technology, the latest information on forage varieties and species selection, and an update on beef cattle research under way at the station. The field day will conclude with an update on the Edisto Forage Bull Test program. To register, please go to: http://www.tfaforms.com/329864.

SC Christmas Tree Association Summer Meeting

Christmas tree growers will meet on June 13 and 14 at Turkey Creek Christmas Tree Farm in McCormick. A cookout, farm tour and presentation on safety tips will be given Friday evening by owners Dale and

Vaccinate Horses Against Mosquito-Carried Diseases

It's mosquito-carried disease season and horses need to be protected. Boyd Parr, South Carolina state veterinarian and director of Clemson University Livestock Poultry Health, recommends horse owners stay current on vaccinations for Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE), West Nile Virus (WNV) and rabies for their horses.

Rolled into One

Their rations are formulated as carefully as any athletes'. While Satterwhite raises all of the forage and much of the grain fed to the herd, Purina nutritionist Barry Dye supplies the supplements necessary to keep each of the five rations in total balance. The dry cows receive different feed than the milking cows, so "Uncle Barry" formulates five different rations.

While some people think that dairy cows and beef cattle are separate businesses, there's actually a lot of overlap. Once a cow's milking days are over, she is culled from the herd. According to Dye, about 3 million dairy cows a year are sold as beef. A Holstein may bring as much—or more—than a beef steer, since she typically weighs 1,400 pounds compared to a live steer weight of 1,100 pounds.

Despite the gloom and doom predictions of less beef on the market, the beef industry is actually in good shape. Nearly 4,000 cattle growers in South Carolina produce 350,000 head of beef cattle, according to the S.C Cattlemen's Association. Two of West Wasn't Won on Salad" encourage consumers to eat lean beef. Two-thirds of today's beef meets government guidelines for "lean," meaning it's a healthy way to get protein.

South Carolina cows supply both milk and meat. Whether you're indulging in homemade ice cream, pouring fresh cream over your strawberries, cooking a hamburger on the grill or eating a juicy steak, you can thank our farmers.
